

Rees-Stalder Award for Sustainability in Corrections

As a leader in sustainability in corrections, GreenPrisons invites you to join in honoring John Rees, former Commissioner of Corrections from the State of Kentucky and Richard Stalder, former Secretary of Corrections for the state of Louisiana, the two individuals most responsible for championing sustainable practices and products in correctional agencies nationwide. Beginning in 2012, GreenPrisons has established a fund that will support sustainable practices and ideas and acknowledge those who are moving the field of sustainable corrections forward through innovation and implementation.

Commissioner Rees and Secretary Stalder were not only innovators of sustainable practices while leading their agencies but were also instrumental in the creation of the American Correctional Associations' (ACA) Clean and Green committee, the ACA's policy statement on Sustainability and the standard on sustainable practices for all agencies accredited by the Commission on Accreditation for Corrections.

YOUR ASSISTANCE IS NEEDED

The Fund will be supported by individuals and corporations like you, dedicated to promoting sustainability in corrections. The Rees-Stalder Fund will be used in three ways: 1) to provide the winner(s) of The Rees-Stalder Award for Sustainability transportation, lodging and registration to the annual GreenPrisons Symposium for the award presentation; 2) to support scholarships for practitioners to attend the Symposium; and 3) to promote the goals of GreenPrisons including training, publications and technical assistance to correctional agencies promoting sustainability.

Join GreenPrisons in acknowledging and supporting those individuals and agencies most responsible for the growth of this cutting edge initiative. In order to make this a sustainable venture, we hope you'll consider a multi-year commitment to GreenPrisons.
